

Guardians of the Gate 2025: ADR Series Part 5

John R. Hollenbeck, Associate Dean for Research and Natalie DeVolder, Research Administrator

Although publications, citations, and the generation of future scholars are clear signs of research accomplishment, another critical role where our faculty shapes the scholarly landscape is through their gatekeeping function as Editors in Chief (EIC), Senior Associate Editors (SAE), Department Editors (DE), Deputy Editors (DE) and Associate Editors (AE) of major journals. Faculty members who serve in these roles have a major influence on the knowledge base, both in terms of the decisions they make when it comes to what is accepted, but also the constructive feedback they provide for papers that are rejected – and perhaps improved as part of the scholarly review process. As a component of the plan to expand the evidence of what constitutes research accomplishment, the current Strategic Plan for Research and Scholarship seeks to recognize individuals who have taken on such roles in journals that are strategically targeted by the college and the units. Because of disciplinary differences in titles, we place in parentheses the number of people who performed the role at the respective journal according to the journal's website.

We compiled this list using Faculty Activity Reports (FARs), then submitted a draft to our six AUHs for review and then verified appointments using the journal's website. If your name does not appear on this list and you held an editorial appointment during calendar year 2025, please let us know immediately and, going forward, ensure your FAR is up to date. With this as context, the list for 2025 includes:
